Report on Coordinating Committee’s March 25th Conference Call
Ashley Schweickart gave a brief report on the March 25th conference call of the Coordinating Committee. The Committee reviewed the Biennial Plan Outline drafted by staff and agreed to commence biweekly conference calls for each committee to work on the various chapters of the plan.

Discussion of Assistance and Training for Local Entities Chapter of Biennial Plan
Committee members started discussion by stating the need to identify professionals who could conduct training and education for local providers and could assist in the creation of a training module. Established training programs could reach a broader audience.

Committee members also discussed the need to work within the existing local provider networks and make it easier for these providers to utilize the various revenue streams that can meet their clients’ needs. Specific suggestions include creating a uniform computer system, using standard eligibility requirements, minimizing duplication of efforts, and minimizing regulations added by state agencies on federal programs and funding streams.

Committee members then discussed creating a simple training with an accompanying reference guide that specifies the eligibility criteria and application procedures for each state agency program that can assist persons who are elderly and persons with disabilities. The reference guide materials would be in multiple formats (online & print) and would be annually updated (by the state agencies) for changes in program rules and regulations.

Committee discussed how lack of funding for administrative costs is a barrier for local providers in terms of their ability to apply for and utilize state funding sources. However, legislative regulations prohibit an increase in administrative funding.

Committee members cautioned that state agency commitment to outreach and training can be difficult given the current budget situation and recommending the creation and funding of educator/trainer staff positions would be difficult, as those positions are vulnerable to elimination during times of economic recession. However, Committee did recommend a commitment by state agencies to a certain standardized training module and continual update to the reference guide.

Committee members next discussed the importance of local providers working together and creating inter-agency relationships, as they are very aware of the needs of their communities. Committee discussed the distinction between local providers that are better at linking to consumers versus those better at linking service organizations to one another. Groups such as the ADRCs and CRCGs, whose mission it is to develop these inter-agency networks, are key resources. ADRCs, CRCGs, and AAAs were also cited as key organizations for bringing local information about needs and barriers up to the state agencies.

Finally, the Committee concluded their discussion by citing the need to prioritize the education of front line staff of each local organization – those that serve as “navigators” for the organization, who assist consumers in connecting to services (case managers, service coordinators, etc.).
