New state council visits Houston, gathers input on special needs housing

(AUSTIN) — Houston-area residents concerned with the housing challenges confronting elderly individuals and persons with disabilities have a unique opportunity to help shape public policy at an upcoming meeting held by the state.

The Housing and Health Services Coordination Council (HHSCC) will accept comment from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. on Wednesday, January 27, at the Houston City Hall Annex Chambers, located at 901 Bagby Street. The new state interagency council is charged by the legislature with increasing efforts to offer service-enriched housing in Texas through increased coordination of housing and health services.

“We are always seeking to better understand the barriers and opportunities that exist across the state regarding service-enriched housing,” said Michael Gerber, Executive Director of the Texas Department of Housing and Community Affairs (TDHCA) and Council Chair. “Ultimately we want to improve the quality of life for many of our most vulnerable neighbors.

“This forum is a rare opportunity for advocates, stakeholder organizations, and the general public to share their views and concerns at the ‘blueprint’ stage of a new state initiative,” he continued. “This input will help the Council shape the future direction Texas takes in this pioneering effort, and I strongly encourage anyone with an interest in this topic to please attend and have your voice heard.”

The Housing and Health Services Coordination Council was created by Senate Bill 1878 during the 81st Texas Legislative Session to increase state efforts to offer service-enriched housing for elderly individuals and persons with disabilities. Service-enriched housing is broadly defined as living arrangements that include health and/or social services in an accessible, supportive environment.

The Council’s mission is to develop and implement policies that coordinate and increase state efforts to offer service-enriched housing, identify barriers preventing or slowing the delivery of such housing, and craft a system to cross-educate staff in state housing and health services entities.
